

Integrated Personal Commissioning (IPC)

Helen Davies-Cox

What is Integrated Personal Commissioning (IPC)?

- In September 2014 Simon Stevens, Chief Executive of NHS England, launched the Integrated Personal Commissioning Programme. The programme is a partnership between NHS England, the Local Government Association (LGA), ADASS – Association of Directors of Adult Social Care and ‘Think Local Act Personal’.

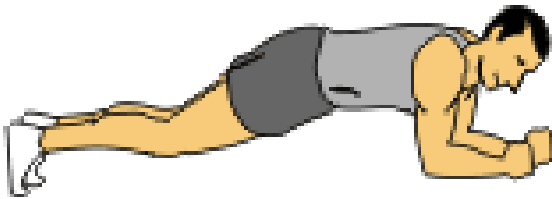

The goals of the programme are

- People with complex needs and their carers have better quality of life and can achieve the outcomes that are important to them.
- Prevention of crises in people's lives that lead to unplanned hospital admissions and institutional care.
- Better integration and quality of care.

The programme is aimed at groups of individuals who have high levels of need; who often have both health and social care needs, where a personalised approach would address acknowledged problems in current care provision, help prevent people from becoming more unwell, and enable people to retain their independence.

- Reduced meds
- Reduced weight & increased mobility
- Elizabeth no longer uses medication for depression

Integrated Personal Commissioning is based on two core elements:

- Care Model: Person-centred care and care planning, combined with an optional personal health and social care budget
- Financial Model: An integrated ,“year of care” capitated payment

IPC builds on existing initiatives

- Personal health budgets www.personalhealthbudgets.england.nhs.uk

What are we doing locally?

- 1 cohort identified in Totnes, driven by the voluntary sector in collaboration with the health and care team (including GP practices) People living with Long Term Conditions including mental health and frailty.
- 1 cohort still to be identified/finalised within Torbay – working with Torbay Community Development Trust alongside their Big Lottery funding project. People living with Long Term Conditions

We pledge to go as far and as fast as we can to deliver high quality person centred care and support to as many local people who might benefit as we can (with the option of a directly held personal budget).
